9am - 3:30pm

In order to survive in today's demanding livestock industry more strategies need to be implemented which focus on chiseling the cost of production and maximizing profits.

Keynote Speaker

Dr. Carole Lafrenière

Carole has worked in the public sector with Agriculture and Agri-Food Canada at the Beef Research Farm in Kapuskasing for 30 years until its closure in 2013. At the Experimental Farm, she worked as a Forage Production and Conservation Research Scientist. Afterwards, she worked at Université du Québec en Abitibi-Témiscamingue (UQAT) as a professor. She developed a forage education program and continued research on pasture and silage conservation for five years. She is presently a retired professor from UQAT, but continues to have interest in northern agricultural development.
